I am grateful to Dr Relf Clark for his meticulous checking, which discovered and corrected inaccuracies, and to my editor-cum-publisher, John Brennan, for editing out inconsistencies in my original manuscript.

BIOS Journal volume numbers are indicated by Roman numerals (XVI to XXV) and pages by Arabic, e.g., 'XVII, 24' means 'volume seventeen, page 24'.

Illustrations in the text are indexed with an italicised page number.

References in bold (e.g., XVIII, 47–54) indicate extensive treatment of the subject-matter in the text, but no other attempt has been made to distinguish what might be important from seemingly inconsequential passing references.

(S) after a page number denotes that the specification of the organ is given in the text. Information in square brackets has been supplied by the Indexer.

In order to save space, words have occasionally been abbreviated by the omission of a vowel or of a final syllable. It has not been considered necessary to specify such abbreviations since their meaning is obvious from the context.

The commonly accepted abbreviations have been used for the counties of England.

Places in Scotland have been identified by Region even where the names of Districts are used in the text. The only abbreviations used for Regions are 'D & G' (Dumfries and Galloway) and 'S'clyde' (Strathclyde).

In the Location Index, all places in Ireland (both in the Republic and in the Province of Northern Ireland) have been indexed under IRELAND.

Locations outside Great Britain are indexed under the name of the country, which is in capitals, e.g., HOLLAND, Edam.

Names of places in the United States of America are followed by the two-letter code now in common usage, e.g. Boston MA. Places in Australia are identified by the accepted abbreviations for the various States, i.e., (ACT), NSW, (NT), QLD, SA, TAS, VIC and WA.

The inclusion of a place-name in the 'Locations' index does not necessarily mean that the building (let alone the organ in it) still exists.

In the 'People Other Than Organ-builders' section are indexed organists, composers, clergy, architects, etc., but discretion had been used to exclude the names of some individuals who receive only a passing mention in the text.
